own, on the slopes of the Lincolnshire Wolds, which has become a centre for arts and crafts. It is a marvellous town to potter about in. There's a magnificent 5-sailed windmill landmark, six stories high, that continues to grind flour with ranquil power. The mill has an antique shop and tearoom in the converted engine house. ALFORD MILL Caistor

Nestling into the hillside at the northern edge of the Wolds, Caistor is an attractive mixture of Georgian and Victorian buildings built since a ferocious fire destroyed the town in 1681. It's a little market town whose population swells a little each week with the Saturday market gathering around the town pump, a cast iron depiction of a lion on a massive pedestal, to commemorate Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee in 1897. MARKET DAY: SATURDAY

Louth

The town stands directly on the Greenwich Meridian line - the line that world time and longitude are measured from. The attractive market square becomes a busy place for the market. St James' spire, 500 years old and 90m high, is the tallest spire on a parish church in the country. Louth retains many interesting buildings from Georgian and Victorian periods, and still has many independently owned and run shops. MARKET DAYS: WEDNESDAY (AUCTION) THURSDAY (LIVESTOCK) FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Market Rasen

Market Rasen is a small bustling market town standing on the banks of the River Rase on the western edge of the Lincolnshire Wolds. Although famous for the only racecourse in incolnshire there's more to Market Rasen. There are all kinds of shops in the town and a thriving market. Between the town and the incolnshire Wolds is Willingham Woods - a great place for a picnic. ARKET DAYS: TUESDAY (AUCTION), FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

The Lincolnshire Wolds

For more than 30 years, much of the Lincolnshire Wolds has been designated an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB), with vistas of big skies over undulating landscapes, punctuated by the picture postcard villages. It has historic sites and connections with famous people such as poet Alfred, Lord Tennyson. Experience its uncluttered roads and enjoy a wealth of sights, a lively calendar of events and a working landscape dotted with fields changing in character and colour all year long - this is a place where you can relax.

Take a cycle through this wonderful countryside and explore its hidden valleys, lush flora, streams and rivers, and as the only upland landscape in the east of England from Yorkshire to Kent, rising to 150m on its western edge, soak up the views towards a distant horizon. Use your time to meet the local people who are proud of their heritage and local traditions.

Across the Wolds there are many fields with lumps and bumps in. These are often sites where a village used to be. Many settlements shrunk in the 12th - 14th centuries. The Black Death reduced the population of many villages but the changes in farming practises often lead to an area being abandoned by locals. Landowners started to enclose their land for extensive sheep farming which meant tenants could no longer use the land to make their living. Many had no other trade and had to move to a town.

Although the economy of the Lincolnshire Wolds has mainly been based on agriculture, industry has shaped its landscape too. For nearly forty years from 1929 the Nettleton area was one of the most industrialised parts of the Wolds. Up to 180 people were employed mining ironstone here. There were railways, together with mounds of spoil, concrete and machinery throughout the area.

between Nettleton and Normanby le Wold.

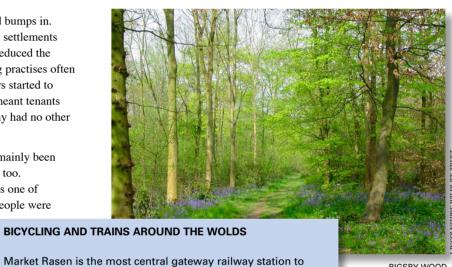

The Wolds has many interesting churches, one of which is All Saints Church at Walesby, which is affectionately known as the Ramblers' Church. It has dramatic views across the Trent valley and has a stained glass window dedicated to walkers with an image of cyclists seen for miles.

Nature Reserves

The map marks a host of nature reserves that are open to the public. The sites offer a variety that is not often found in so small an area. In the east can be found the National Nature Reserve at Saltfleetby/ Theddlethorpe Dunes. Covenham Reservoir attracts wintering wildfowl and other aquatic and waterside birds whilst as a contrast Rigsby Wood offers 37 acres of ancient oak and ash woodland and Red Hill includes steep chalk escarpment grassland, a quarry with an exposure of red chalk that is rich in fossils, and many flower species including bee orchids.

FAMILY DAY OUT IN MABLETHOR

Mablethorpe

Mablethorpe is a fantastic, friendly seaside resort. Alongside the modern entertainment facilities are the traditional features of golden sand on the award winning beach, splashing waves, the funfair, lots of ice cream and a massive friendly welcome. MARKET DAYS: MONDAY (SUMMER) AND THURSDAY

Generating Power From the Wind

The ten wind turbines on the Mablethorpe Wind Park were completed in October 2004. They produce over 16 million units of electricity each year, provide sufficient power for over 5000 homes and save an annual 15,000 tonnes of carbon dioxide emission. There is an information board at the viewing area.

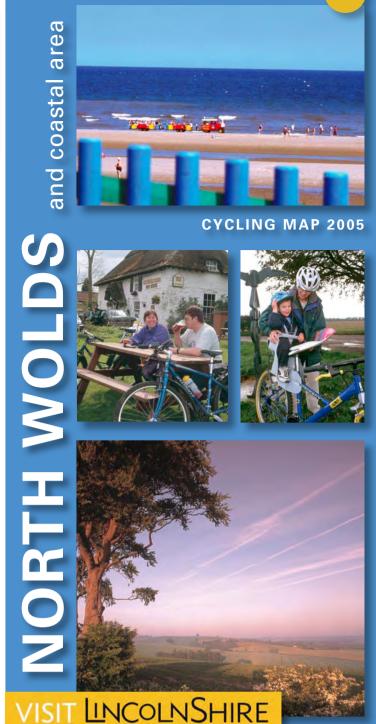

Sadly many workers lost their lives in this work and some are buried in the churchyard at nearby Claxby. The church and many of the houses in Nettleton are built of locally sourced stone. There is an information board about local mining in the rest area on the road

Being the highest ground in the area, the Wolds has been important for communications. The Stenigot mast is a lattice tower 110m tall and was built as part of the Chain Home Defence System. The visible TV mast is Belmont mast, built in 1965. It is 388m tall and can be
